SNAP Webinar and Resources

At the spring State Directors' meeting, David Stout spoke to South Carolina's partnership with the SNAP program and the resources it brought to his programs.

Tomorrow (sorry for the short notice) the National Skills Coalition is sponsoring a webinar with David as one of the panelist.

Details below:

SNAP E&T can be an important part of a state's workforce development system, helping low-income individuals access education and training, as well as critical supportive services, that are often otherwise difficult to obtain. But in order to capitalize on the potential of this program, workforce stakeholders need to better understand both what is allowed under SNAP E&T and how the program interacts with the larger SNAP nutrition program.

An Untapped Resource: Understanding SNAP E&T

Dear Lennox,

Join us next Tuesday to learn about the role that SNAP Employment and Training \(SNAP E&T\) can play in a state's workforce development system.

SNAP E&T can help low-income individuals access education and training, as well as critical supportive services that are often otherwise unavailable. On this webinar you'll learn from NSC and other experts how state and local communities can capitalize on this largely untapped resource and take advantage of new opportunities, like recently authorized pilot grants. You'll learn about what is allowed under SNAP E&T and how the program interacts with the larger SNAP nutrition program.

You'll also hear about best practices for developing SNAP E&T programs from experts who were involved in developing Washington State's highly effective program. These practices are featured in a new report from NSC and Seattle Jobs Initiative. The report is part of a growing suite of resources NSC and its partners are developing to help states better understand and implement successful SNAP Employment and Training (SNAP E&T) programs.

Panelists will include:

Rachel Gragg, National Skills Coalition

Ed Bolen, Center on Budget and Policy Priorities

Rick Krauss, Consultant, formerly with the Washington State Board for Community & Technical Colleges

Laura Rowley, Seattle Jobs Initiative

Dr. David Stout, State of South Carolina
